9am

The Laodicea church (Revelation 3: 14-22) comes in for strong criticism from Jesus. The church's problem has very much to do with smug self-sufficiency: they were convinced that they were doing very well indeed as a church, and as individuals. But Christ tells it like it is, and His evaluation of them is quite devastating. But at the same time, His love knows no bounds: "Here I am! I stand at the door and knock." As one commentator says: "In an act of unbelievable condescension Christ requests permission to enter and re-establish fellowship."

Reading: Revelation 3: 14-22

Preacher: Keith Warren

In a fallen world it's hard to trust anyone but yourself. We know what it's like to be let down and disappointed and we find it much easier to just rely on ourselves. But can we really trust ourselves? The Bible teaches us to trust in God, not in ourselves. As difficult as it seems, we are called to depend on Christ for everything. Everything. Only when we trust in him can we really become like him. Jesus relied 100% on his Father and he calls us to do the same.

Reading: Proverbs 3: 5-6.
